Scenario 1

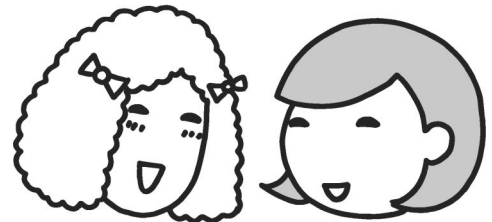

The night before going to church on Sabbath, Tommy got into a huge argument with his parents. Didn't they understand that he wasn't a kid anymore? He could make his own decisions about whether or not he should clean his room. Tommy went to bed angry and frustrated at his parents, and the next morning, he woke up feeling the same. He gave his parents the silent treatment during the drive to church. When they got to church, he got out of the car and stomped away from them. Tommy saw one of his church friends, and as they were about to enter into the chapel, his friend told him that there was going to be Holy Communion today.

What should Tommy do?

Scenario 2

Janice and Tammy were the best of friends. They grew up together and would often spend hours just talking about anything and everything. They talked so much that they would often get in trouble during class time and even during service. This would often drive their RE teachers crazy! One Sabbath, there was going to be Holy Communion, and as always, the two of them sat together during the sermon. Very soon afterwards, the two of them began to giggle and whisper to each other.

Why is this not a correct way to partake of Holy Communion?

How should we behave when we partake of Holy Communion?
